

Another look showing ice cream-like colors which include Seim's favorite color, blush pink. Her lush garden frames the entire room.

floor, a brown leather couch, and I hoped to incorporate a Western-styled chrome and leather desk I already owned,” Seim says. A soft “greige” background, she imagined, would show off the verdant greens of her succulent collection as well as her favorite colors — blush pink and other pastels. Seim, an avid gardener, has a large floral garden that can be seen through the expansive southern exposure of the living room windows. Bursting with pink flowers every summer, her new color palette would create a beautiful transition from the garden views to the soft pinks of her interiors.

In June 2019, they finished the very last room in the house — the master bath. During a telephone conversation about marble bathroom floor options, friend and interior designer Denise Homme explained to Seim that Solatube, a company she frequently used in her design projects in California was looking for a new bathroom project to use in their marketing. Solatube, an eco-friendly lighting company specializing in natural light, was offering product and installation as an incentive to the homeowners. The Seims happily agreed to the lighting proposition. Amazed at the natural light that now permeates the once-dark bathroom, they welcomed the change. To continue the appreciation for pink into the newly remodeled bathroom, Seim added touches of soft blush décor. Without question, art and design are important to Seim. Although particularly drawn to photography, she appreciates any unusual art that speaks to her through color and subject. Her love of reading, design and gardening are an integral part of the new spaces. When remodeling the '60s rambler, the Seims wanted the finished project to be comfortable, connected and reflective of the things they love. Goal accomplished. ✱

Without the Solatube installed, seen on the ceiling, this bathroom room would be dark as night. Water color by Ellen Diederich.

Antlers bring natural beauty to the sofa table, reflecting her charming eclectic design style. She retrieved them from her husband's hunting camp in western North Dakota.

CONTRIBUTORS:

Microlams: Dakota Construction

Cabinetry: Don Demming

Windows, Sheet Rocking, Plumbing: Dave Seim

Maple Flooring: Brandon Johnson

Taping: Bob Palm

Painting: Carol Seim