EUROPEAN SCHOOL FRANKFURT

Contributed by Architectural Record
Written by Mary Pepchinski

When city officials approached architects NKBAK in late 2013 to design a temporary building for the campus of the European School Frankfurt (ESF), they were more concerned with speed than “an interesting architectural solution,” says firm principal Andreas Krawczyk. A large contingent of European Central Bank employees and their families were poised to move to the German city in the next year, threatening to overcrowd the already at-capacity ESF, which offers pre-K-through-12 instruction for the children of staff at European Union institutions. In such situations, Frankfurt often builds schools out of shipping containers, but Krawczyk and his partner, Nicole Kerstin Berganski, hoped to provide a more innovative alternative, convincing the client to consider other modular systems.

Located on the city’s northwestern periphery, the ESF required the new building to house a cafeteria, a gym, and 17 classrooms for 500 students in pre-school, kindergarten, and first grade. Because the school offers children daily lessons in their mother tongue, which can be any one of the 24 official EU languages, each classroom needed a generous 870 square feet, to allow several instructors to teach small groups simultaneously.

Due to a tight schedule, with only 15 months for design and construction, the architects elected to create a modular building using wood. Keeping the classroom dimensions in mind, they laid out the three-story structure on a 9-foot 10-inch grid. Then they designed three types of modules, each measuring 9 feet 10 inches by 29 feet 6 inches: a standard shoe-box-like unit, with two long plywood walls; a second type with one long wall and one glue-laminated beam; and a third, with only beams. Single modules function as individual rooms or are combined to create larger spaces. For example, a classroom consists of a beam-only module flanked by two more modules, each with one wall and one beam.

The architects clustered modules along an L-shaped corridor, which is enclosed by extensive glazing when single-loaded and widens when double-loaded to become a communication zone. Common spaces take up most of the ground floor, and classrooms occupy the two upper levels. Floor-to-ceiling windows, all triple-glazed, flood the interiors with daylight. Because the city required that the windows be aluminum-framed for maintenance reasons, the architects chose this material for the flat and corrugated panels and the perforated screens that cover much of the exterior. "A wood facade on a wood building is banal," says Krawczyk.

The 100 spruce modules were fabricated in Austria with insulation, electrical cables, plumbing and sanitary fixtures, acoustic panels, glazing, and heating units installed at the factory. The fabricator also produced the non-modular wood components—the corridors and stairwells—as well as metal elements such as the facade panels and screens, and the structural steel used to achieve an almost 40-foot-long span over the gym. Flatbed trucks transported the prefabricated elements 290 miles to the site, arriving every half hour over a three-and-a-half-week period.

The modules were stacked on a slab and fastened to create a three-dimensional frame stiffened by the stairwell walls. To avoid damage, some finishes and fixtures, including the varnish of matte whitewash on the interior walls, the vibrant stairwell colors, the dove-gray linoleum floor, and the ceiling luminaires, were added on-site, at the end of the construction process.

In many respects, the project has exceeded expectations: it met the tight schedule, cost 25 percent less than a school built with traditional methods, and is even a game-changer: the city is now planning permanent modular wood schools. The ESF building was initially given a five-year occupancy permit. When it expires, either an extension will be granted or the school could be dismantled and rebuilt elsewhere.

The building does have some problems. The wood structure's lack of thermal mass and the extensive glazing caused overheating in warm weather, which proved troublesome because the facility houses activities during summer vacation. Additional sunshading and ventilators were recently added to reduce heat gain and improve air circulation.

The school may look tough, but the seemingly weightless cladding and generous fenestration provide glimpses of classroom activity and create a surprisingly welcoming impression. The solution feels thoroughly appropriate for young children.

Inside, the wood construction dominates. The air smells lightly of spruce and, as Kalle Endres, a parent, observes, "The building feels cozy and permanent," in contrast to classrooms in shipping containers. Nevertheless, the unembellished corridors look slightly unfinished, as if awaiting the users' touch. Step into the classrooms, however, and the artwork, furnishings, and child-size belongings complete the spaces. "We did not aim to be pedagogical," says Krawczyk.

"WE WANTED TO MAKE A LIGHT-FILLED AND SPACIOUS SCHOOL SO CHILDREN CAN FEEL FREE AND CREATIVE."

-- Andreas Krawczyk,
NKBAK Principal

He and Berganski have accomplished this without resorting to the cloyingly sweet aesthetic that is often applied to architecture for children. Instead, their building challenges and satisfies with its poetic clarity.

ACTAVO'S FIRST BIM PROJECT DELIVERED TO PRIMARY SCHOOL IN THE CAPITAL

Through an investment in building information modelling (BIM), MBI Member Actavo | Building Solutions has delivered its first BIM level two project – a £1.9 million classroom complex – to Granard Primary School in the heart of London.

BIM is a process covering the entire lifecycle of a building from its conception to demolition resulting in a 3D digital model of its physical and functional characteristics.

Compliant with BIM level-two requirements, Actavo designed and delivered the sustainable, two-story block, which comprises eight classrooms, an open learning studio that acts as a breakfast and after-school care facility, cloakrooms, WCs, kitchen facilities, and staffrooms.

Onsite work at Granard began in January 2015, with the standalone, classroom complex being handed over in August 2015, meaning the project – from initial design to full completion – took just 22 weeks.

Matthew Goff, UK operations director at Actavo | Building Solutions, says “By July last year (2015), BIM level two was implemented in Actavo to not only provide a smoother construction process, but also to reduce costs and waste by identifying potential issues before they arise.”

Using BIM, the leadership team at Granard Primary School was able to see their ideas visualized into a realistic building model with an accurate timeline before onsite work started.

“THERE IS A DEFINITE ‘NEED FOR SPEED’ WITHIN THE EDUCATION SECTOR, WHICH HAS BEEN FUELLED BY A SHARP RISE IN DEMAND FOR SCHOOL PLACES IN THE CAPITAL.”

“Offsite construction means projects such as Granard Primary School can be completed in a much faster timeframe than traditional builds. It also ensures minimal disruption to day-to-day schooling activities.”

As well as meeting BIM level two requirements, Granard’s new building is designed to surpass sustainability targets. It passes Building Research Establishment Environmental Assessment Methodology (BREEAM) ‘excellent’ standards – one of the world’s most comprehensive and widely-recognized measures of a building’s environmental performance.

Cheryl Grigg, head teacher at Granard Primary School, says “Many schools are looking for economical ways to accommodate pupils. It was clear to us that we’d prefer an offsite solution, because it’s just as high quality as traditional build, but delivered in a much shorter time-frame without a price premium.”

“Using Actavo’s regular step-by-step progress reports, we were able to use the construction process as part of a special project on the pupils’ curriculum. As well as providing additional space, the new building allows us to separate our pupils into smaller groups meaning we can teach them more effectively and they can make better progress.”

Wandsworth Borough Council has invested £10 million into permanently expanding 11 primary schools across the borough, with Granard Primary School being just one of the schools benefiting from a new education facility.

INDUSTRY GROWTH BEGINS WITH EARLY EDUCATION INVOLVEMENT

Contributed by Ramtech Building Systems, Inc.

A company's involvement in the education market can reach far beyond providing buildings for school districts. The growth of the modular industry begins in the classroom with students interested in the fundamentals that our industry is built upon. Ramtech Building Systems, a design-build construction company, has developed a long-standing sponsorship with the Mansfield Independent School District (MISD) Education Foundation in Texas that enhances the educational experience for students.

"My background is in engineering and business and because of that I've always had a passion for math and science related grants. When you can see the results of the grant demonstrated before you it really takes things to a whole other level," said Mike Slataper, Founder of Ramtech.

Ramtech's most recent grant of $4,500 sponsored an Innovative Teaching Grant, which will be used to support a program developed by a group of MISD intermediate school librarians. The program "Make Your Mark in Mansfield Intermediate Libraries: Inspire, Imagine, Investigate, Innovate," will purchase hardware, software, as well as tools and equipment to support the intermediate school's STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art, and Math) programs.

"Ramtech's support for grants through the MISD foundation is the largest single donation we give each year to a non-profit, and for us there's never a question as to whether we'd do it again," said Linc Moss, President of Ramtech.

Specifically, the program plans to develop a "Makerspace" area in the libraries of the district's six intermediate school campuses where students can come together to investigate, collaborate, and create in a unique community section of each facility. Individual projects will be guided by the school librarians through inquiry-style learning, encouraging students to use a collaborative approach in order to build and create by making connections to what they have learned in the classroom and applying it to the real world.

Since the foundation's inception in 1998, Ramtech has had a steady presence with Slataper and Moss serving on the foundation's board of directors. The foundation has given back in excess of $2,700,000 to MISD Schools, providing the financial resources for projects and activities that go beyond the normal classroom experience. More information on the MISDEF can be found on the foundation's website at www.mansfieldisd.foundation.org.

"When a business looks at attracting employees one of the things that is critically important is the local public school district. Anything Ramtech can do to make our school district even a tiny bit better is money well spent," said Moss.

Opportunity to provide facilities for the education market comes with a host of challenges. For ‘fleet owners’ any sizable move from ‘equipment rental’ to the leasing and selling of modular classrooms is a step that will have significant structural impact on an organization.

Over the years the educational building market has continued to develop and evolve and in turn compliance with design and code requirements has become increasingly complex and demanding. Whether temporary or permanent installations, there remains a constant challenge to prepare and execute for clients on these projects.

While many end-user markets for modular buildings may be served with a ‘product mentality’ (temporary short-term buildings) the educational market clearly requires more of a ‘process mentality.’

Today’s educators, administrators, and students are challenging the world around them like never before. LEED standards have become basic required knowledge to serve this market. Sustainability is a given. The movement now is toward agile learning spaces, capable of changing to adapt to the many different learning styles of students. For example, huddle and breakouts in circulation areas, movable partition walls, varied flooring and lighting; and these requests are from our temporary building prospects and clients. The Educational Clearing House is a valuable resource to keep up with what is happening in school pedagogy and design.

Meeting the demand of those who seek permanent modular construction (PMC) requires a different skill set requiring that an organization change its staffing structure to develop a qualified project team rather than having ‘fewer people wear more hats.’

As many know, providing value in PMC will often require that you convince a committee of people to believe in the importance of collaboration over competition - a great obstacle and challenge to the formation of a PMC project. Through education and experience, as well as with the help of MBI and each other, we will have gained enough expertise in the particularities of our unique process that a contract for preconstruction services to assist a client in sorting it all out may become standard operating procedure in the future.

CHPS PREFAB UPDATE: REALIZING THE PROMISE OF HEALTHY, HIGH PERFORMANCE PREFABRICATED MODULAR CLASSROOMS

Written by Bill Orr, Collaborative for High Performance Schools

The Collaborative for High Performance School (CHPS) launched the 2016 CHPS PreFAB™ Criteria and Program nationally at the 2016 World of Modular Convention. The CHPS PreFAB program provides a streamlined process for pre-approval of prefabricated modular classroom models that meet the CHPS Criteria rating system for healthy, high performance schools. Classrooms earning this designation meet stringent standards for indoor environmental quality, energy efficiency, materials, waste management, and other sustainable attributes that help students learn and thrive while lowering operating costs. CHPS PreFAB Pre-Approval is available for models that include: single or multiple classrooms, one or more stories, permanent construction or relocatable, have independent HVAC systems, are pre-wired and, if applicable, are pre-plumbed.

Originally developed in 2006 and last updated in 2009-10, the CHPS PreFAB Program was revamped to incorporate the evolution of high performance, prefabricated school construction that has occurred over the past decade. Prefabricated classrooms and school buildings have emerged as a practical alternative school construction/procurement method. Numerous production models are readily available over a continuum of prefabrication and various construction materials, and several multi-story, specialty space, and sustainable options have been introduced.

The CHPS PreFAB program was revised by a subcommittee of the CHPS National Technical Committee and comprised of a balanced representation from manufacturers, schools, and other stakeholders. "Having a rating program that focuses on the unique aspects of prefabrication will help spread awareness and greater adoption of this efficient process on a national scale," said Tom Hardiman, subcommittee co-chair and the Executive Director of the Modular Building Institute. "The CHPS PreFAB Update provides the opportunity for districts to easily identify and 'shop' for classrooms that meet their educational program needs," said Cathy Allen, the other subcommittee co-chair and Chief Operations Officer with the Sacramento City Unified School District.

The program has benefits for both manufacturers and school purchasers/leasers of prefabricated modular classrooms. For manufacturers, CHPS PreFAB is an opportunity to obtain pre-approval of prefabricated modular models meeting CHPS Criteria while schools receive assurance that the classrooms being purchased or leased incorporate many high performance characteristics. CHPS PreFAB units can be installed as part of a CHPS project to help achieve CHPS Designed or CHPS Verified project recognition. Using a CHPS PreFAB unit can reduce the school-required input to a minimal number of site-related prerequisites and credits, thus reducing verification time and cost.

CHPS PreFAB is based on the 2014 US-CHPS Criteria with two levels of qualification available; CHPS PreFAB™ and CHPS PreFAB Leader™. The program is available nationally with options for regional approvals. Models that meet the CHPS requirements will be listed in the CHPS High Performance Product Database and have a CHPS PreFAB product label.

The Gen7 24x40 model is the first to successfully navigate the updated CHPS PreFAB pre-approval process and San Martin-Gwinn Elementary in the Morgan Hill Unified School District in California is the first to register a CHPS Verified project using a recently pre-approved model. "The CHPS PreFAB Program is a game-changer! The program makes it easier for schools to evaluate and select high quality, sustainable classrooms that are verified to perform at a higher level, not just in California, but across the country," said Tony Sarich, co-founder of American Modular Systems and Gen7 Schools. Several manufacturers are vying to be second.

Details on the CHPS PreFAB program and process can be found at www.chps.net/CHPS-PreFAB/. Contact prefab@chps.net for more information.

GOVERNMENT AFFAIRS

INDUSTRY WIDE:

ICC-ES APPROVES SHIPPING CONTAINER APPROVAL PROCESS

At their February 9th 2016 meeting, the ICC-ES Evaluation Committee approved a process to allow local code officials to accept used shipping containers as building modules. This proposal is known as “AC462 — Proposed New Acceptance Criteria for Shipping Container Building Modules.”

Scope: The acceptance criteria is limited to the evaluation of the reuse of shipping containers as building modules, where the shipping containers are modified for each building project, with the steel components of the shipping containers designed for use in the construction of steel structures under Sections 104.9, 2204, 2205, 2210, and 2211 of the IBC and R104.9 and R301.1.3 of the IRC. The intent of the acceptance criteria is to evaluate the building module’s quality control procedures to establish and verify the dimensions, chemical and physical properties of the steel components of the shipping containers being modified into building modules.

So what does this mean for the modular industry? As part of MBI’s 5 in 5 initiative, we feel it is our role to make members aware of trends, issues, and possible barriers to increased market growth. This new process could open more doors (and eyes) to the use of prefabricated modular construction. However, given our insatiable appetite as consumers in the U.S. in particular, we have a whole lot of used shipping containers at our ports. It is not unrealistic to assume some percentage of developers will choose to explore this path rather than having a modular manufacturer prefabricate the components at their facility. Nonetheless, these used containers must be modified in some manner before being used in construction.

SHOT DOWN IN THE BUCKEYE STATE

MBI recently submitted comments to the Ohio Board of Building Standards to delete Chapter 34 Moved Structures of their adopted standards. Ohio amended that section to include problematic language for the relocatable industry, language that is contrary to the industry’s recent progress made in the ICC code development process within the International Building Code (IBC) and International Existing Building Code (IEBC).

MBI requested that the state delete that chapter in its entirety and refer code officials to the IEBC to determine code compliance with existing buildings – exactly what the ICC decided to do with its 2015 codes. The board denied MBI’s petition, stating that the “proposed language of the IEBC appear to exceed the mandate to maintain existing buildings...”

One of the challenges with our proposal is that Ohio is currently on the 2009 version of the codes and the technical justification we submitted is based on changes we made to the 2015 version. MBI is doing this in an effort to “speed up” adoption of some of the better code language at the state level, rather than waiting for states to follow their typical three-year code adoption process. We will consider submitting a modified proposal while the state maintains that it will consider our comments again when they review the 2015 codes for adoption.

A STORM BREWING IN TEXAS?

No one will argue the need for states to have building codes to provide a minimally acceptable level of safety and protection to the public. But sometimes, the building codes try to legislate away any and all possible risks. The result is often a much higher cost for construction and a chilling impact on new developments and the local economies.

Such is the case in Texas in our opinion. The Texas State Energy Conservation Office (SECO) through the adoption of RULE 19.53 of the Texas Administrative Code has required that the 2015 edition of the International Energy Conservation Code (IECC) to go into effect November 1, 2016 for commercial construction. Their push for adopting 2015 over the 2012 edition is an attempt to accelerate the evolution of the energy performance of buildings constructed in the state.

Practically speaking, this means that local jurisdictions will push for the adoption of the full suite of the remaining 2015 codes, including the 2015 International Building Code for commercial construction. What you may or may not know, is that the 2015 IBC contains a new requirement in section 423, which could be crushing to school construction budgets. This requirement calls for hardened storm shelters to be incorporated into any Group E occupancy with an occupant load greater than 50. For the modular industry, that may mean additional planning for stand-alone steel or concrete structures on the campus if such structures cannot be incorporated into the modular plans.

This new requirement impacts all new school construction in areas where shelter design wind speeds are 250 MPH. In essence, that area includes large portions of Texas, along with Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, and parts of West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Georgia, South Dakota, and New York.

Cross referencing those states with the current versions of the IBC show that only Oklahoma is now subject to these requirements, with Texas expected to join soon. Nine other states in this region are currently on the 2012 IBC and should anticipate this requirement in their next code update.

At this point, there's not a lot that can be done about amending the 2015 IBC, as the 2018 code cycle just recently ended and the next opportunity to address this in the model codes is the 2021 cycle.

Given that the education market is projected to be one of the top three markets for our industry for the next several years, we wanted to make you aware of this so that you can prepare accordingly. MBI wants to thank the good folks at Ramtech Building Systems in Mansfield, Texas for bringing this matter to our attention.

EDUCATION MARKET

From single classrooms to complete campuses, permanent modular construction offers public, private, and charter schools what other construction methods cannot: accelerated project timelines, more economical pricing, and less disruption. Permanent modular schools are indistinguishable from other schools and can be constructed to any architectural and customer specifications. MBI members design and build schools of all types and sizes using traditional building materials like wood, steel, and concrete. Virtually any size permanent school can be built, installed, and ready for occupancy, some in as little as 90 days. Perhaps most importantly, by using off-site technology, open construction sites are eliminated while school is in session. Students are safer and teachers compete with less disruption.

RALSTON MIDDLE SCHOOL

Architectural Excellence

Ralston Middle School is located roughly 20 miles south of San Francisco. The two-story classrooms were designed to maximize the amount of learning space for students while delivering the smallest footprint possible. Placed on the outer edge of campus the classroom wing had to be as compact as possible with nearby parking and gymnasiums making for a tight placement of the building. The classrooms feature large windows giving students a wonderful view of the San Francisco Bay as well as providing ample natural light. Additionally, dimmer controlled Solotubes allow staff to regulate natural light, reducing power consumption from artificial lighting.

Technical Innovation and Sustainability

The unique modular construction process allowed Meehleis Modular Building, Inc. to simultaneously prepare the campus as well as begin construction in their plant of the classroom modules. Great care was taken to design the two-story classroom as aesthetically pleasing as possible, while keeping the narrow site requirements in mind. Meehleis also designed and constructed beautiful walkway enclosures on both ends of the wing, providing a unique design element that also serves the students and learning space.

Company: Meehleis Modular Building, Inc. | Location: Belmont, California | Project Size: 9,074 Square Feet | Days to Complete: 116

Cost Effectiveness

With work taking place both on campus and in plant, costly delays of weather, material loss, and unforeseen site complications can be nearly eliminated. Additionally, Meehleis buildings are test fitted to ensure the modules will place correctly and without issue. Individual modules are then completed to the furthest extent possible before being shipped, saving money on expensive on-site work. Ralston was also designed to exceed many green code requirements saving the owners on operating costs.

ANTONIO MARIA LUGO ACADEMY

Architectural Excellence

Due to the design-assist project approach utilized on this project, the project architect and the modular building design team were able to collaborate on design considerations during the conceptual phase of the project to ensure modular construction systems selected would support the design intent. The project consists of a single structure, which houses an entire charter school campus and the related functional spaces. The building contains 17 classrooms, a library, a kitchen, multi-purpose space, office spaces, interior corridors and interior stairs. The building's exterior is covered with a vertical metal siding system that utilizes multiple colors and panel profiles, with aluminum and stucco accents to provide a striking architectural presence. The building interior features abundant natural light in every educational space and 10' high ceilings throughout. The finished building reflects the coordinated efforts of all team members to provide a design focused experience.

Technical Innovation and Sustainability

The program requirements provided by the client required the building to utilize a central corridor system with interior stairs and elevator, as well as a separate exterior egress system. The client also required 10' high ceilings throughout the project. Further, alcoves were required in the corridor at irregular spacing to eliminate doorway projections. To meet these requirements Silver Creek Industries developed a series of specialized building frames, which utilized offset columns and cantilevered beams to accommodate the corridors. The building used a mixture of module sizes with concrete floor decks and 14' floor-to-floor heights. The delivery of the modules to the project site required the preparation of specialized shipping systems in order to accommodate the size and weight of the modules. Special planning was used to organize the interior spaces in a manner that minimized the amount of "close-up" work required on site at the module joint locations.

Cost Effectiveness

Due to the complexity and scope of the project, the ability to perform the work in a factory environment provided the opportunity for significant cost reductions and increased quality control measures. The careful placement of the restrooms allowed those spaces to be enclosed on all sides within a single module and to leave the factory fully finished. Spaces that could not be enclosed due to size or location were partially finished in the factory and wherever possible the remaining finishes were pre-cut in order to minimize the duration of work onsite. The electrical distribution system was designed to spread subpanels throughout the building to reduce the number of electrical connections made in the field. Where possible the ductwork was designed to be installed within a single module, which eliminated the need for horizontal connections in the field.

BASIS INDEPENDENT SCHOOL

Architectural Excellence

This private school is 90,000 sf, of which the upper 4 stories, including the penthouse, are 58,865 sf of non-combustible modular design. The Basis Independent School's progressive K – 12 curriculums specialize in hi-tech physics, maths, and sciences. The modular area features stairwells, bathrooms, corridors and 32 spacious classrooms including chemistry and biology labs, all then carefully blended with the theatre and gym as well as the lower floor, built on site. The building uses a unique day-lighting strategy that combines strategically placed windows of varying sizes to allow pockets of light into classrooms, as well as a strip of vertical, two-story undulated glass “waterfall” curtain wall application to flood the common areas, cafeteria, and hallways with natural light. The school promotes simplicity in design with open and exposed ceilings, ductwork and even cable trays. The exterior architectural panel system compliments the random sizes and patterns of the unique window application. Architectural design was developed by Partners for Architecture, Stamford, Connecticut.

Technical Innovation and Sustainability

NRB's “build together” process combined with the steel and concrete construction methodology set the modules together at the plant with two floors joined together vertically and horizontally. This allowed for the creation and precision fit of many of the steel framed triangular and “W” shaped module angles needed to suit the site plan and the site-built portion of the design. An angled glass rail that followed the angled module design was preinstalled at the plant along the second level corridor module to overlook the open expanse of the cafeteria floor below. The random design and locations of the large and small windows to promote changing views to the outside from inside the classrooms, along with the variations in exteriors from solid architectural panels to fully glazed curtain walls, both straight and tilted, offer some remarkable building elevation changes in this striking school design.

Cost Effectiveness

The complicated nature of this urban location included it being declared a ‘Brownfield’ site within a flood plain, with poor soils conditions, so the project required meticulous planning from beginning to end. Building just under 70% of the school offsite and away from the constricted area was the solution to reduce site disturbance, activity and cost, as there was very limited staging or lay down area from which to work. In this neighborhood without greenspace, the designers applied innovation and an outdoor terrace was created off the first level that the modules surround and partially cantilever over so the students have outdoor spaces without leaving the school footprint. The building design uses an energy efficient gas boiler system that was preinstalled in the modular penthouse and delivered to the site. Ductwork, piping, sprinklers, and cabling were neatly installed and exposed in the ceiling cavity to help keep finish costs lower, and provide the simple look the school envisioned.

DUBOIS INTEGRITY ACADEMY CHARTER SCHOOL

Architectural Excellence

The phase one design of the DuBois Integrity Academy was engineered to accommodate a modular second-floor addition to help minimize the initial construction cost. Phase One of the school consists of a 25,000 sf permanently installed building that houses approximately 400 students. The building was constructed with two wings and a site-built common area that is utilized as a cafeteria and assembly space. This first phase contains 17 classrooms and an administration area with offices, a conference room, and an open reception area as well as a nurse's station, common area with a warming kitchen, restrooms and a teacher's workroom. The exterior of the building consists of brick wainscot with Hardie-Plank siding and an exterior lighting protection system. As enrollment continues to grow, a Phase Two build-out is planned, which will add a second floor for grades three to five. This will add an additional 12,300 sf with 11 classrooms, stairwells, and elevator to the current structure.

Technical Innovation and Sustainability

The innovative design of Phase One was constructed to accommodate a future second story. With a waiting list of hundreds of students, the vertical expansion will serve the growing student population with minimal construction disruption to the current students, teachers, and staff. The site-built common area, which serves as the central focus point of the school, was constructed on a concrete slab and utilizes the side walls of the adjacent modules to support the roof trusses of this area. The building also includes an internal roof drainage system. Through combining modular and site-built elements, the hybrid process accelerated the construction schedule to be ready for the 2015-16 school year.

Company: Innovative Modular Solutions, Inc. | Location: Riverdale, Georgia | Project Size: 25,000 Square Feet | Days to Complete: 116

Cost Effectiveness

The overall project design went through multiple iterations, with a budget that was both driven by the anticipated student count and limited due to a site that required significant grading work to become suitable for use as an educational facility. Ultimately, to stay on budget, the project team settled on a sprinkled, wood frame structure. The project team also opted to use a factory that was located less than four hours from the project site to minimize transportation costs for the owner. At the factory, the mechanical system was designed and installed to minimize on-site work to only consist of approximately five percent of the total material and labor. This combined with a shortened project schedule, allowed Innovative Modular Solutions, Inc. to provide the 25,000 sf educational building in about 5 months from award.

"INNOVATION
STARTS WITH LISTENING"

Easy.
Profitable.

Your customers will love the quick cooling and quiet operation of LG Duct-Free Split Air Conditioning. They'll also appreciate the speed and cleanliness of your work. And with your drastic reduction in man-hours, you should be pleased with LG as well. Instead of wasting time with ducts, you simply have to install three parts: an outdoor condensing unit, an indoor unit and refrigerant piping/electrical wiring to connect the two. LG Air Conditioning systems are designed for ease, comfort... and profit. With LG, we are bringing innovation everywhere.

With LG, it's all possible.™
